Volunteer with Sekama: Grow Knowledge, Share Impact

The Sekama Volunteer in Agriculture Program connects passionate professionals, students, and researchers with Ugandan farmers to co-create practical solutions for real farm challenges. Through hands-on placements, volunteers help improve livestock management, strengthen cooperatives, and build local capacity while gaining valuable cross-cultural experience in sustainable agriculture.

Whether you're an experienced agricultural expert or a student eager to learn, this program offers a unique opportunity to work alongside farmers, exchange ideas, and make a lasting difference.

Volunteers are matched with farms and cooperatives based on their skills and interests, with Sekama providing full coordination, orientation, and on-ground support. Placements typically last 3–6 weeks, with flexible options for professionals, interns, and research fellows.

Apply now to join a global movement connecting knowledge, communities, and change — one farm at a time.
